Learn Financial Fundamentals at your Own Pace

Chances are pretty good at some point in the last year you had to do some “virtual learning.” Depending on where you are and what is happening in your town, your school district may be conducting classes online or allowing students to learn on their own time. InTouch Credit Union is also doing our part to keep financial lessons on the front of our younger members’ minds with our own library of virtual resources.

By visiting the official ITCU.org website, you can explore our Financial Awareness library where we have free videos and interactive quizzes to test how much you know about finances. Some of the resources we offer include:

- Our It’s a Money Thing® library of videos. These short, lighthearted videos cover everything from savings accounts to stock market basics. With a focus on teenage topics, this is a perfect place to build your foundation of financial literacy.

- We also have Knowledge of Financial Education (KOFE) resources, which get a little more detailed into subjects like budgeting, building credit and more. These courses can be completed on your own time, and let you test your understanding through a series of quizzes.
- You can also read through some past articles in The Arrival Guide, our blog specifically tailored for our young adult members.

Whether you are in the classroom or on your sofa, the basics of financial education can be reviewed when you have the time. (And, you can always get your parents or guardians to learn with you, too!)
