Spring Cleaning Can Have You Seeing Green

If you've ever been told to clean your room (and who hasn't?), you probably tried to get it done as quickly as possible. However, hiding stuff under your bed or piling it all up in your closet so it's out of sight only works for so long. Eventually, it will go from simply cleaning your room to "Spring Cleaning" your room.

But Spring Cleaning is something only adults do, right? Actually, no; Spring Cleaning is something anyone can do, and the results can free up space while also possibly giving you some additional money to enjoy.

The first step to Spring Cleaning is the simplest, and the most challenging. Do you still plan on wearing that shirt you haven't worn in two years? Will you plan on going back and re-reading those books taking up space on your shelf? Would you ever re-watch those movies or play through those videogames again sitting by your TV?

If the answer is "not really," then you're on your way to a successful Spring-Cleaning session! You can bundle those items up to donate or sell, and free up some space in your room.

It's true, in most cities, there are stores around town that will offer to "buy" your gently used books, movies, video games, etc. Of course, you should get your parent or guardian's permission to sell them at the actual store, but the amount of money you get back, or the in-store credit you're given, may surprise you!

This spring season clean out your room and enjoy the good feelings, and possible extra income!

Working for you and your financial well-being.
