

ON MY OWN

News For Young Adults from InTouch Credit Union

Fourth Quarter 2020 Newsletter

(Digital) Financial Education Resources Available from InTouch

If 2020 has taught us nothing else, it's that there is always a digital option for achieving whatever goal we may be trying to accomplish. We have apps that can deliver pho to our front doors, light switches that can be operated by speaking and even wristwatches that let us know everything from the weather to our overall health. And that's just the "fun" stuff; there's a world of digital financial educational resources available, too, including some on financial topics from InTouch Credit Union.

By visiting www.itcu.org/financial-awareness, you'll be able to access a variety of resources to provide you quick tidbits of information on financial topics ranging from basic concepts to more complex ideas to consider. Through our It's a Money Thing® video platform, you can watch one video on compound interest before catching one on the perils of loan sharks, or spend three minutes learning about the stock market and then watch a helpful overview on how to prepare for a job interview.

Many of these same topics are expanded upon within the Knowledge of Financial Education (KOFE) training modules, which allow a user to read up on a financial subject, test their comprehension and track their progress. You'll find KOFE on this same page and, just like with the It's a Money Thing videos, these modules are free to use when you want, where you want.

Of course, you also have the option to make an appointment to visit your local ITCU branch, or call our Member Care team at 800-337-3328, option 5, for any additional financial questions you might have. With ITCU, answers to your financial questions are only a click or call away!

For even more young adult financial literacy, visit: itcu.org/arrivalguide

Working for you and your financial well-being.

itcu.org

ITCU is federally insured by the National Credit Union Administration.